bugging dischord to put the records back in print for years and was told by a friend "oh yeah dischord is repressing the first album.... oh yeah something yeah they're playing shows." Beyond excited. Loving this thread.

I did get to see Black Eyes once, at the Sickle in Providence (probably '03?). I remember having no idea how to find the place (my printed Mapquest directions were of no help), driving around aimlessly and spotting the drummer from Lightning Bolt on the street. He was able to tell me where to go.

Got to see Horses once as well, opening for Q and Not U at some church on the outskirts of Boston. Great times.

Greg

nocultureicon
Apr 5, 11:22 PM

Ditto with Kam - saw them at Warehouse, Black Cat, and at Cafe Mawonaj with La Mi Vita Violenta and Paper Doll (if I'm remembering right). Their shows set the bar so high for what the experience of seeing live music could be. Storming the stage with the rest of the crowd at their last DC show is a cherished memory. We have a bunch of high school friends traveling in from around the country and Canada for this show. Thanks for this unexpectedly tender thread.

Apr 5, 11:47 PM

I was able to find a little info on Horses:

Horses was a band formed by Dan Caldas, Hugh McElroy, and Mike Kanin from Black Eyes and Fiona Griffin from El At It in 2004. An EP titled '4 5 6 7' was sold on a weekend tour with Q and Not U, Food For Animals, and Manhunter. Three unreleased tracks were made available through Ruffian Records after the band's dissolution

Michaelangelo M
Apr 5, 11:52 PM

Horses was big on percussion like Black Eyes, but without the high pitch vocals. I did a little research and it looks like they had one ep on a cd-r that they most likely only sold on tour. I should've picked one up when I saw them.

Michaelangelo M
Apr 5, 11:54 PM

Oh man yep. That was the tour. Q And Not U, Horses, Food for Animals and Manhunter. This was back in April 2005 I believe.

What a joy this thread has been all day.

I used to put on small venue shows, with a friend back home in the UK. In Leeds, Sheffield and Newcastle, mostly. We never worked with Discord, but a lot of the bands we put on and gigs we went to could best be described as Dischord-adjacent.

There was a brilliant music scene in the North of England in the late 90s and early 2000s.

Anyway, Black Eyes came to Newcastle once, on (I believe) their only UK tour, but I was under the weather and didn’t make it to the show.

A regret I was hoping to finally vanquish this weekend!

I actually ended up living in NY for something like 15 years, but relocated to LA a little while ago and sadly there just hasn’t been an affordable flight come up, that I can make work.

So... Thanks for all the replies today. It somehow made it all so much worse and also so much better.

And if anyone wants two tickets on the house: hit me up. They might be going spare.

PS. I’ll trade ‘em for video clips, photos of the show, and merch!

PPS. Absolutely thrilled to finally hear that Horses record, too!

Got to see them twice with Q & Not U: once in St. Catharines Ontario, and once in (I think?) Toledo. Incredible shows! The Toledo show also weirdly had Mastodon on the bill, still touring on their first record.

I recently moved from Austin to Brooklyn, and I could use some show-going friends if any NYers want to hang!

Kam Tambini
Apr 6, 10:03 AM

Just because I didn’t realize this existed for the longest time... here is Black Eyes first 7” Some Boys / Shut Up, I Never - it came out on Ruffian not Dischord so I don’t think it’s part of the batch of re-releases they’re doing this year.

I was in highschool in DC back in 2003/04 when I saw them - teenager but luckily with lax rules.

@ Matthew Farragher: Ed Templeton and skate videos were also responsible for so much of my music taste. First heard of sonic youth in one of the toy machine vids.

No, thank yous. Missing out on so much stuff from the late 90s/early 00s. My roommate and I booked shows in college and had a five minute message on an answering machine cassette from Ian Mackaye explaining what’s been going on for the previous year in everyone’s lives and why they weren’t doing shows. Blew our minds.

I probably have a rip of “Ten” on my computer I can share later if anyone is interested, from the Closet Full Of Clothes compilation (unless someone else has it handy). Downloaded the Horses EP, this morning. Thank you so much, I forgot that existed.

The first email thread I ever had with my now wife, the subject line was “Black Eyes Bootleg”, sharing a long-defunct link to Black Eyes’ final show on Discord’s SoundCloud. This’ll be her first time seeing them!

Matty

@Elliott Tucker , ahhh, this rules! I love Scott. Y’all need to come to Indy once you’re on the road, we have a bunch of space for the rv! Also, @chelsey.hahn, thank you, hah! Perennial is tight! If you come out to the midwest, holler and we can set up some shows together!

Ryan Boyle
Apr 6, 11:24 AM

I had the pleasure of seeing the band twice, and interviewing them once circa 2003. It was shortly after the first record came out, we’d driven out five hours to Pensacola from Gainesville to see them on their only Florida date of the tour, and I was a freshfaced college kid asking silly questions, in awe of how great they were.

The site with the interview is long-gone now, but if you’re interested, the Internet Archive’s Wayback Machine miraculously has it saved: https://web.archive.org/web/20061126223651/http://www.bornbackwards.com/black%20eyes/home.html

Abraham Hmiel
Apr 6, 12:21 PM

All right, from the original thread snark-curmudgeon, this thread has given me so much happiness and pleasure and it no longer feels like my head is stuck in a tire.

Thanks for the Horses link! Definitely going to jam that later. And also thanks for the other ephemera that’s been saved and shared. This label will always have the best fans in the damn world.

I remember that I discovered Black Eyes through a friend’s AIM away message (deformative, of course) in late 2004 when I was a broke undergrad at University of Delaware. And in that era, I could only find a few random tracks off mp3 p2p services. I eventually got a record player a few years later and listened to the whole thing and loved it.

And unfortunately, it was already too late to see them live (or book shows for them at UD)!

My little brother introduced me to Black Eyes on one of the myriad amazing cassette mix tapes he’s made for me over the years. I got to see them at Graceland in Seattle in ’03 and they absolutely slayed. My brother never had a chance to see them play live and it’s burned his biscuits for almost two decades. He’s flying out to NYC on Saturday and we’re finally setting things straight.

I saw Black Eyes at Fort Reno, Café Mawonaj, and their last show at Black Cat. That last Black Cat show was really incredible too. I was in high school at the time and my parents never let me go to shows in DC. So that night I slept over at a friend’s house and we snuck out together. In retrospect, it may have been my first Black Cat show (and my first time encountering Black Cat Bill, RIP).

In my high school web design class, one of the assignments was to develop a website for someone. So I reached out to Dischord who then put me in touch with Jacob from Black Eyes. He was down for me creating a website for them, but then in the middle of my project he emailed me back to say that actually unbeknownst to him someone else was already designing their website. Either he or Dischord then put me in touch with the Notasquat house (a punk house in Petworth at the time) and I designed a site for them. That website also never went fully into production but I didn’t care. It was just really cool being a nerdy 16 year old and feeling welcomed into the diy world by the older DC punks.

reading this thread has been incredible and I’m so sad I had to sell my ticket to a friend! :( was recovering from scary/unexpected/live-saving surgery, but thankfully am well enough now that i’ve been tempted to reach out to the folks in this chain giving out tickets. BUT of course I also have my sister coming by for the holiday and I know she would NOT fare well in the pit (she could barely handle the crowd at a Sidney Gish/ Feeble Little Horse concert a few months ago, and it’s not like either artist is all that crazy LOL). truly a loneliness no [REDACTED] could comprehend.

I’ll be living vicariously through this, and all the stories of the Q And Not U/Black Eyes tour that happened when I was like, 3 years old!!! the real question is – do you think we’ll ever get a Q reunion? they’re one of the most important bands to me and I’ve been praying for it to happen for years now. and of course I’m hoping we see more of Black Eyes too. I think they teased in their reddit AMA that they might be making more music soon [eyes emoji] anyways, hello from Newark! have fun y’all! thanks for all the links :)

I got to see black eyes back in the day on the “Cough” tour at All Books Coffee Shop in Summerville, SC and it was amazing. All Books was a really tiny space but Tomas booked amazing bands - a truly special place in South Carolina in the early 2000s.

Weird Black Eyes moment recently - I’ve been bartending for a really long time & when the reunions were announced they posted a video of the All Books show on their Instagram and I re-shared it (I post a lot of photos I've taken from the late 90s to today - sadly non of black eyes in my personal archive). In recent years I’ve slowed down on serving drinks, only a couple times a year at this point, but I picked up a shift around Thanksgiving and a regular came in… and I asked “what have you been up to?” and he responded “playing music - I saw you posted about it” and it turned out my regular was none other than Jacob. It blew my mind to find that out after 7 or 8 years. A wonderful dude.

Excited to see some friends on this list (looking forward to catching up with you Nick & Zan!) - also is the Nico on this thread the Nico that used to work at Da Capo on the UES? Same last name - maybe just a coincidence?

Looking forward to having fun with ya'll!

Hey, so...

I'd gladly trade my two tickets for the Brooklyn show for this as well, but...

Is there anyone in this thread that would consider grabbing a longsleeve t-shirt and a zine for me from a show?

Would really mean the world to me, and cheer me up immeasurably from the depression that is not being able to go.

I even just called around to see if anyone I knew had airline miles they wanted to sell me! Lol/sigh.

If you think you’d be down for a Venmo/Zelle/PayPal merch grab type of situation, please feel free to text me on the number below. I know it’s a weird request, but I’d love you forever.

Hey Everyone.

It's been really great reading this thread. I am beyond excited for the weekend's show. I have been stuck for the last thirty hours at Denver International Airport trying to make it to DCA/Ben's Chili BOwl and a weekend of rock n roll.

I don't have anyplace to stay in NYC or Philly. Anyone have room for me to crash or does anyone want to split a hotel room? This Easter/Passover/Spring Break weekend has found all my friends with other commitments.

For the last twenty years I have been living in exile in California after a dozen years in the DMV. Seeing Mi Ami and Body Swap saved my life. The Black Eyes are very close to my top five Discord bands ever [Hoover, Black Eyes, Slant Six, Lungfish and Fugazi] they might have put out the best albums on the label in the last twenty years.

Everyone is talking about Horses. Besides the great Earthen Sea recordings another really great band is Water Damage from AUsin. Mike K plays drums. The REpeater album is one of my favorites for 2022. Besides the Messthetics album I can't think of anything better lately.

If you have any suggestions for a place to crash in the NYC/NJ/PA area.

THanks

Hello,

Apologies for the mistaken CC'ing on the previous volley, oy vey-- shit happens!
Please accept our embarrassed apologies!

For everyone's sanity we ask everyone to please refrain from responding "all" to the wrongly CC'd previous message - 🥲 🥲 🥲 🥲 🥲

Love,

Literally just replying all in this thread cause it looks like Todd P doesn't want us to anymore.

Don did you find a place to stay?

REPLYING ALL in the service of true chaos

I'm from Baltimore and was around for the era of Black Eyes, but as much as I saw the other great DC bands of that time frame (1905 or Crispus Attucks or Canyon anyone?) somehow seeing BE live totally passed me by. Very excited to correct that tomorrow!

With the cease and desist we've reached Sickos Meme Level.

No intent of replying before, since I'm grumpy I can't make it and y'all seem lovely, but sending a Reply All when specifically asked not to is the right level of rebellion for me these days.

Also, I still have my ticket. Intended to sell it, but if anyone here has a friend they wanna bring or introduce to a killer lineup of bands, email me. All yours.

We can't be stopped. And we won't stop. That being said. If anyone wants to join the discord we made click here.

The more the merrier.
We're going to make channels dedicated to music recommendations, people promoting their own bands, show stories. It's a good time.

KEEP IT GOIN GIRLS! Market
Hotel can’t stop us

@Zan - fun tidbit Todd P helped me through my BANGER of an after prom party in 2007 or 2008 :)

Amused by Market Hotel’s notion that this email thread—of all the things we receive in our inboxes—would be a threat to “everyone’s sanity”

I was going to listen to the Market Hotel marketing email but then I remembered Todd P never listened to my band’s crappy demo in 2006

I’ll take out phone numbers/potentially private info but as long as staples/kinkos are on my side I’ll make as many as I can and give ‘em out for free.

Will confirm :)

That this was all an accordant and not some newfangled social media attempt is rather special. Thanks for the horses ep.

Well I can’t promise a zine, but a limited lil’ run of tees might’ve been printed up to commemorate this fortunate gaffe... :]

BLACK EYES THREAD 4EVER!

This thread has been a delight to scroll through. I bought my ticket before I knew I’d be gone for work, so I also have a ticket for whomever knows someone who wants to go.

Will confirm :)
